News from Entire County in Condensed Form

Frank Hatch of Antioch had filed suit in the circuit court to settle the title to swamp land property he claims to own along the Fox river which was acquired from the county by tax deed many years ago. A number of these cases are pending in the local and supreme courts involving Lake county property.

A hearing was held last Thursday afternoon near Fox Lake for the purpose of obtaining right-of-way, widening and straightening Fox Lake-Volo road. It is planned to drain and grade the road in order to have it ready for paving as soon as money is available.

Up to date about fifty per cent of the milk producers of the Hebron territory are enrolled in the Hebron local of the Milk Producers' association. Up until a short time ago most of the dairymen of that community were strongly in favor of the Marketing company.

Judge Edward D. Shurtliff of Marquette, was elected presiding judge of the appellate court for the third district at Springfield.

Newport township recently voted a $44,000 bond issue. This together with other road funds to come in this year will make over $50,000 for road purposes. This money will probably be used to gravel all the earth roads in the township.

F. Scott McBride, of Chicago, well known in Lake county, where he has been active for years, for 13 years superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, at a meeting Wednesday of the National Board of Directors in Indianapolis, it was announced Thursday.

A band of gypsies appeared in Richmond recently, but their operations in that village were very brief. Marshall Reed soon got on their trail and the gang was ordered out of town. They left quietly and quickly. Richmond is earning the reputation of being a very unpopular stopping place for gypsies and bums of all kinds.

Notwithstanding the fact that the roads and weather conditions were anything but favorable for such a splendid showing, nearly six hundred men and women voters of the city of McHenry turned out to express their views, via ballot, as to the $10,000 bond issue designed to provide money with which to purchase the right-of-way for route 20. The same will pass thru our enterprising municipality. The bonds were approved by a large majority.

At Deerfield last Saturday night there was instituted a new Masonic Highland Park lodge, and most of the lodge with 53 charter members, 28 of whom have been members of the Highland Park lodge, and most of the others from Chicago lodges. District Deputy Grand Master W. F. Krichman was in charge. Grand Master Arthur F. Wood of Chicago and other grand lodge officers were present to aid in establishing the new lodge and an interesting session is in prospect. Following the ceremonies, which began at 8 o'clock, a banquet was served. A large number of Highland Park Masons attended.

That State's Attorney V. S. Lumley of McHenry county may not prosecute twenty-one liquor cases, to be tried in circuit court soon, was seen in the announcement that petitions asking for the appointment of a special prosecutor had been presented to Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtliff.

Prominent McHenry county dry leaders were behind the movement to have a special prosecutor appointed. It is said.

The members of the Ladies' Afternoon Social club at Hebron realized $62 at a supper given at a gathering of the Business Men's club held there recently. The money has been turned into the library fund.

On Wednesday of last week Sol LaPlant who has been seriously ill with blood poison for some time underwent an operation at his home in this village. The operation proved successful and we are glad to report that Mr. LaPlant is now steadily on the gain.

LEONELLA STEPHENSON IS ELECTED TOWN TREASURER

Antioch elected new members for the town board Tuesday. There was only one ticket in the field and therefore not much competition. AHLSTROM CASE IS CONTINUED FOR 30 DAYS

The case of Edwin Ahlstrom, sheriff of Lake county, accused by Marjorie Moberly and Marguerite Dorland, two pretty former "white slave" prisoners in the Lake county jail, of having taken them from their cells for wild drinking parties on the north shore, was continued by agreement Thursday when it came up in the federal court. Ahlstrom's attorney, W. F. Weiss, and Assistant U. S. District Attorney Charles Swanson agreed to postpone the case for 30 days, at which time they will stipulate as to facts.

ALLENDALE BOYS ENJOY ANNUAL BANQUET FRIDAY

The basketball teams of Allendale school for boys celebrated their annual banquet Friday night in their dining room overlooking Cedar Lake. Members of the team made short talks as did Capt. Bradley, Al Carney and Secretary E. H. Clifford, of the Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Carney and Mr. Clifford were the only Waukeganites to attend the feast.

TWO MORE BUS ROUTES SOUGHT

C. L. Kutil Is Made County Club Leader

Lake County Fair Ass'n to Appropriate $400.000 for Premiums

At a meeting held at the Libertyville High School April 11th, C. A. Kutil, agricultural instructor of the Antioch Township High School, was appointed the Boys' Club leader for Lake County. Mr. Kutil's duty will be to work with the Illinois state department of Boys' and Girls' Club work and the Lake County Fair Bureau in promoting and overseeing Boys' club work in this county. Mr. Kutil is also the local club leader.

At present a calf club is being organized among the farm boys in Antioch township. Anyone interested in a calf, pig, poultry, corn, alfalfa, or soy bean club is advised to write to Mr. Kutil at Antioch and get further information.

Mr. Kutil advises us that much interest is being shown in the work. About 35 boys and girls signed up last Friday at Libertyville. This is in addition to a number who could not be there. About 100 attended the meeting. A dairy helper calf club was started, also sewing and canning clubs for the girls. There are one or two boys entered for the acre corn club, but not enough to organize, so we need a few more boys for the acre corn club.

Just drop a line to Mr. Kutil or the Farm Bureau or call and see either one if you want to join the club. The Farm Bureau will furnish the seed and explain all details. One boy from Everett is anxious to organize a poultry club and wants more to enter, while one or two more want to get into a pig club.

The County Fair association has offered $400 in prizes for boys and girls club work exhibits at the fair, evenly divided between boys and girls clubs. This is a really great incentive to get into some branch of the club works.

The Farm Bureau has the help and cooperation of the University of Illinois and Agricultural College. Miss Yasold plans to visit Lake county several times this summer in active supervision of the Girls' club work. Since, as yet Lake county has no home bureau with its home advisor this latter form of extension service we hope to see realized here in the near future.

A meeting of the local leaders will be called in a few weeks after the clubs are completely organized. In the meantime, surely, more of our farm boys and girls will want to take advantage of this fun and work. How about it? Call or write the Farm Bureau office.

The following boys and girls have joined so far:

S.); Charles Padlock, Antioch, Calif club; Lester Flood, Gurnee, calf club (Holstein); Shelburne Flood, Gurnee, calf club; Arthur Dillon, Round Lake, calf club; Thomas Dietz, Wilson, calf club; (Guernsey); Joe Roekenbach, Prairie View, calf club; George Shellenberger, Libertyville, calf (grade); W. ADVERTISING TO BE ADDED

Workers at the county tax office are preparing to assess the advertising costs to delinquent taxes. County treasurer Ira Pearsall stated that after April 19, the office will add the costs to the amount of the taxes due. After May 1, one per cent interest will also be added, and after June 1, two per cent.

WILLIAM DEHNE OF LONG LAKE DISAPPEARS

Waukegan, Lake county and other north shore towns were scoured by police and sheriff's in an effort to locate William Dehne, a prosperous garage owner and automobile agent of Long Grove, near Barrington, who disappeared last Wednesday night under conditions which led police to believe he was either kidnapped or murdered and his body carried to some hiding place.

Chief of Police J. V. Balz and Sheriff Ahlstrom were on the lookout for the missing man in this community. Police of every town along the north shore and Chicago are seeking to trace the Long Grove man.

Dehne's automobile which he drove out of Barrington Wednesday night, was found abandoned a mile outside of the village on the Northwest highway. The pocket book of the missing man, who was known to have had a considerable amount of money in his possession, was found in the car, together with a dollar bill and 60 cents in change.

FLIVVER LOSES WHEEL IN AUTO MISHAP TUESDAY

"Miss Cherry Blossom" at the A. T. H. S. Soon

The annual operetta given by the high school is now well under way. This year the operetta "Miss Cherry Blossom," will be given under direction of Miss Ewen, who has charge of glee club work in the school. Due to the large crowds who were forced to stand at "The Garden of the Shah" last year, it has been decided to give "Miss Cherry Blossom" two evenings, May 9 and 10, instead of one as in previous years. There will be reserved seats both nights.

The cast for this operetta is larger than that of any former one. Besides a chorus of American girls, there is a group of Japanese maidens, also a large chorus of boys. There are eight principals and soloists in this opera, five of whom were in "The Garden of the Shah." All of these principals have sung on the high school stage before and need no introduction to the Antioch audience. The principals are: Vida Palmer, Richard Cass, Mable Van Densen, Emmet Webb, Albert Tiffany, Lester Nelson, Mr. Watson, and Albert Herman.

A. B. C. Hear Clifford at First Dinner

Seventy-five Representative Business Men Attend the Club's First Dinner

About 75 representative business men, of Antioch township gathered at the first get-together dinner of the Antioch Business Club Monday night at Ross' restaurant.

With good eats and a beautifully set dining room the crowd warmed right up to a bigger, better Antioch spirit. One of the outstanding features of the dinner was the number of young men in the sitting. And from the continued buzz of conversation all through the dinner it was plain to see that ideas on the possibility of the new club were being exchanged freely.

Mr. Aht, the president, called on the Rev. Fr. Lynch for the blessing. After the dinner Mr. Aht called on a few of the prominent citizens of Antioch for a few remarks, among them being Rev. Stanton, Rev. F. Flower, Chase Webb, John J. Morley, A. N. Tiffany, Frank Kennedy, H. S. Roberts, Bulch Rogers and Rev. Fr. Lynch.

The club had as its guests Judge Taylor of Waukegan, Lew Hendec, county clerk, and the speaker of the evening, E. H. Clifford, secretary of the Waukegan Chamber of Commerce. The talks by all three of the visitors was heartily received.

One of the bright features of the talks given by the business men of the town was the insistence that Antioch must go outside to advertise this section of the country. Mr. J. C. James' appeal to those present to "let's get together on this advertising and let people know what we have here" was very effective. Mr. Roberts appeal along the same line was listened to with a great deal of interest.

The diners adjourned to Woodman hall after a rising vote of thanks was given to the Ross' for the wonderful dinner and service enjoyed, where more than twenty new members were signed up for membership to the club.

Zen of The Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Transley's hay-cutting outfit, after stacking 2,000 tons, is on its way to the big Y.D. ranch headquarters. Transley is a master of men and circumstances. Linder, foreman, is substantial, but not self-assertive. George Drakz, one of the men, is an irresponsible chap who proposes to every woman he meets. Transley and Linder dine with Y.D. and his wife and daughter Zen. Transley resolves to marry Zen. Y.D. instructs Transley to cut the South Y.D. "spite o' high water" and a fellow named Landson.

CHAPTER II

Transley and Linder were so early about next morning after their conversation with Y.D. that there was no opportunity of another meeting with the rancher's wife or daughter. They were slipping quietly out of the house to take breakfast with the men when Y.D. intercepted them.

"Breakfast is waitin', boys," he said, and led them back into the room where they had had supper the previous evening. Y.D. ate with them, but the meal was served by the Chinese boy.

In the yard all was bustling excitement. The men of the Y.D. were fraternally assisting Transley's gang in hitching up and getting away, and there was much bustling activity to an accompaniment of friendly profanity. It was not yet six o'clock, but the sun was well up over the eastern ridges that fringed the valley, and to the west the snow-capped summits of the mountains shone like polished ivory. The exhilaration in the air was almost intoxicating.

Linder quickly converted the apparent chaos of horses, wagons and implements into order; Transley had a last word with Y.D., and the rancher, shouting "Good luck, boys! Make it a thousand tons or more," waved them away.

Linder glanced back at the house. The bright sunshine had not awakened it; it lay dreaming in its grove of cool, green trees.

The trail lay, not up the valley, but across the wedge of foothills which divided the South Y.D. from the parent stream. The ascent was therefore much more rapid than the trails which followed the general course of the stream. Huge hills, shrouded together, left at times only wagon-truck room between; at other places they skirted dangerous embankments worn by spring freshets, and again trekked for long distances over gently curving uplands. In an hour the horses were showing the strain of it, and Linder halted them for a momentary rest.

It was at that moment that Drakz rode up, his face a study in obvious annoyance.

"Danged if I ain't left that Pete-horse's blanket down at the Y.D.," he exclaimed.

"Oh, well, you can easily ride back for it and catch up on us this afternoon," said Linder, who was not in the least deceived.

"Thanks, Lin," said Drakz. "I'll beat it down an' catch up on you this afternoon, sure," and he was off down the trail as fast as "that Pete-horse" could carry him.

At the Y.D. George conducted the search for his horse blanket in the strangest places. It took him mainly about the yard of the house, and even to the kitchen door, where he interviewed the Chinese boy.

"You catchee horse blanket around here?" he inquired, with appropriate gesticulations.

"You losse boss blanket?"

"What kind boss blanket?"

"This a brown blanket for that Pete-horse."

"Where boss?"

"Mine," proudly.

"Where you catchee?"

"Raised him."

"Good boss?"

"You betcha."

"Huh!"

"You no catchee horse blanket, hey?"

"No!" said the Chinaman, whose manner instantly changed. In this brief conversation he had classified Drakz, and classified him correctly. "You catchee him, though—some h—l, too—you steekee found here. Bent it," and Drakz found the kitchen door closed in his face.

Drakz wandered slowly around the side of the house, and was not above a surreptitious glance through the windows. They revealed nothing. He followed a path out by a little gate. His rise had proven a blind trail, and there was nothing to do but go down to the stables, take the horse blanket from the peg where he had hung it, and set out again for the South Y.D.

As he turned a corner of the fence the sight of a young woman burst upon him. She was hatless and facing the sun. Drakz, for all his admiration of the sex, had little eye for detail. "A sort of chestnut, about sixteen hands high, and with the look of a thoroughbred," he afterwards de-

He changed feet again. He had gone too far to stop. He must strike the iron when it was hot. Of course he had no desire to stop, but it was all so wonderful. He could speak to her now in a whisper.

"How about you, miss? How about you an' me jus' settlin' down?"

She did not answer for a moment. Then, in a low voice:

"It wouldn't be fair to accept you like this, Mr. Drakz. You don't know anything about me."

"An' I don't want to—I mean, I don't care what about you."

"But it wouldn't be fair until you know," she continued. "There are things I'd have to tell you, and I don't like to."

She was looking downward now, and he fancied he could see the color rising about her cheeks and her frame trembling. He turned toward her and extended his arms. "Tell me—tell your own George," he coaxed.

"No," she said, with sudden rigidity. "I can't confess."

"Come on," he pleaded. "Tell me. I've been a bad man, too."

She seemed to be weighing the matter. "If I tell you, you will never, never mention it to anyone?"

"Never. I swear it to you," dramatically raising his hand.

"Well," she said, looking down bashfully and making little marks with her finger-nail in the pole on which they were leaning, "I never told anyone before, and nobody in the world knows it except he and me, and he doesn't know it now either, because I killed him."

"Of course you did, dear," he murmured. "It was wonderful to receive a woman's confidence like this."

"Yes, I had to kill him," she repeated. "You see, he—she proposed to me without being introduced!"

It was some seconds before Drakz felt the blow. It came to him gradually, like returning consciousness to a man who has been stunned. Then anger swept him.

"You're playin' with me," he cried. "You're makin' a fool of me!"

"Oh, George dear, how could I?" she protested. "Now perhaps you better run along to that Pete-horse. He looks lonely."

"All right," he said, striding away angrily. As he walked his rage deepened, and he turned and shook his fist at her, shouting, "All right, but I'll get you yet, see? You think you're smart, and Transley thinks he's smart, but George Drakz is smarter than both of you, and he'll get you yet."

She waved her hand complacently, but her composure had already maddened him. He jerked his horse up roughly, threw himself into the saddle, and set out at a hard gallop along the trail to the South Y.D.

It was mid-afternoon when he overtook Transley's outfit, now winding down the southern slope of the tongue of foothills which divided the two valleys of the Y.D. Pete, wet over the blankets, pulled up of his own accord beside Linder's wagon.

"Lo, George," said Linder. "What's your hurry?" Then, glancing at his saddle, "Where's your blanket?"

Drakz's jaw dropped, but he had a quick wit, although an unbalanced one. "Well, Lin, I clean forgot all about it," he admitted, with a laugh, "but when a fellow spends the morning chatting with old Y.D.'s daughter I guess he's allowed to forget a few things."

"Oh!"

"Heckon you don't believe it, eh, Lin? Heckon you don't believe I stood an' talked for so long I just had to pull myself away?"

"You reckon right?"

George was thinking fast. Here was an opportunity to present the incident in a light which had not before occurred to him.

"Guess you wouldn't believe she told me her secret—told me somethin' she had never told anybody else, an' made me swear not to mention. Guess you don't believe that, neither?"

"You guess right again," Linder was quite unperturbed. He knew something of Drakz's gift for rambling.

Drakz leaned over in the saddle until he could reach Linder's ear with a loud whisper. "And she called me 'dear'," George dear," she said, when he came away."

"The h—l she did!" said Linder, at last prodded into interest. He considered the "George dear" idea a daring flight, even for Drakz. "Better not let old Y.D. hear you splainin' anything like that, George, or he'll be likely to spoil your youthful beauty."

"Oh, Y.D.'s all right," said George, knowingly. "Y.D.'s all right. Well, I guess I'll let Pete feed a bit here, and then we'll go back for his blanket. You'll have to excuse me a bit these days, Lin; you know how it is when a fellow's in love."

"Huh!" said Linder.

George dropped behind, and an amused smile played on the foreman's face. He had known Drakz too long to be much surprised at anything he might do. It was Drakz's idea of gallantry to make love to every girl on sight. Possibly Drakz had managed to exchange a word with Zen, and his imagination would readily expand that into a love scene. Zen! Even the pined, balanced Linder felt a slight leap in the blood at the unusual name which suggested the bright girl who had come into his life the night before. Not exactly into his life; it would be fairer to say she had touched the rim of his life. Perhaps she would never penetrate it further; Linder rather expected that would be the case. As for Drakz—she was in no danger from him. Drakz's methods were so preposterous that they could be counted upon to defeat themselves.

Below stretched the valley of the South Y.D., almost a duplicate of its northern neighbor. The stream hugged the feet of the hills on the northern side of the valley; its ribbon of green and gold was like a fringe gathered about the hem of their skirts. Beyond the stream lay the level plains of the valley, and miles to the south rose the next ridge of foothills. It was from these interlying plains that Y.D. expected his thousand tons of hay.

Linder's appreciative eye took in the scene; a scene of stupendous sizes and magnificent distances. As he slowly turned his vision eastward a speck in the distance caught his sight and brought him to his feet. Shading his eyes from the bright afternoon sun he surveyed it long and carefully. There was no doubt about it; a hay-lug outfit was already at work down the valley.

Leaving his team to manage themselves Linder dropped from his wagon and joined Transley. "Some one has bent us to it," he remarked.

"So I observed," said Transley. "Well, it's a big valley, and if they're satisfied to stay where they are there should be enough for both. If they're not—"

"If they're not, what?" demanded Linder.

"You heard what Y.D. said. He said: 'Cut it, spite o' h—l an' high water, and I always obey orders.'"

They wound down the hillside until they came to the stream, the horses quickening their pace with the smell of water in their eager nostrils. It was a good ford, broad and shallow, with the typical bowlder bottom of the mountain stream. The horses crowded into it, drinking greedily with a sort of droning noise caused by the bits in their mouths. When they had satisfied their thirst they raised their heads, stretched their noses far out and champed wide-mouthed upon their bits.

After a pause in the stream they drew out on the farther bank, where were open spaces among cottonwood trees, and Transley indicated that this would be their camping ground. Already smoke was issuing from the chuck wagon, and in a few minutes the men's sleeping tent and the two stable tents were flashing back the afternoon sun. They carried no eating tent; instead of that an eating wagon was backed up against the chuck wagon, and the men were served in it. They had not paused for a midday meal; the cook had provided sandwiches of bread and roast beef to dull the edge of their appetite, and now all were keen to fall to as soon as the welcome clanging of the plow-colt which hung from the end of the chuck wagon should give the signal.

Presently this clanging filled the evening air with sweet music, and the men filed with long, slouchy tread into the eating wagon. The table ran down the center, with benches at either side. The cook, properly gangling the men's appetites, had not taken time to prepare meat and potatoes, but on the table were ample bins of graniteware filled with beans and tomatoes, pitchers of slrup and condensed milk, tins with marmalade and jam, and plates with butter sadly suffering from the summer heat. The cook-filled their granite cups with hot tea from a granite picher, and when the cups were empty filled them again and again. And when the tables were partly cleared he brought out deep plates filled with raisins and with evaporated apples and a thick cake from which the men cut hunks as generous as their appetite suggested. Transley had learned, what women are said to have learned long ago, that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and the cook had carte blanche. Not a man who ate at Transley's table but would have split his blood for the boss or for the honor of the kang.

The meal was nearing its end when through a window Linder's eye caught sight of a man on horseback rapidly approaching. "Visitors, Transley," he was able to say before the rider pulled up at the open door of the covered wagon.

He was such a rider as many still be seen in those last depths of the ranching country where wheels have not entirely crowded horseback off of horseback. Spare and well-knit, his figure had a suggestion of slowness which the sense would have belied. His face, keen and clean-shaven, was brown as the August hills, and above it his broad hat sat in the careless dignity affected by the gentlemen of the plains. His leather coat afforded protection from the heat of day and from the cold of night.

"Good evening, men," he said, courteously. "Don't let me disturb your meal. Afterwards, perhaps I can have a word with the boss."

"That's me," said Transley, rising. "No, don't get up," the stranger protested, but Transley insisted that he had finished, and, getting down from the wagon, led the way a little distance from the eager ears of its occupants.

"Why do you keep that hideous hat on?" he asked. "You priced it $200. You will never sell it."

"We don't try to sell it. But the other hats look like great bargains by comparison."

PRECAUTIONS FOR OPERATIONS ON PIGS MUST BE OBSERVED

Ordinarily the castration of young pigs is a simple operation and one which many farmers know how to perform. There are precautions to observe, however, in sanitation and in the case of certain conditions, such as rapture, which should be given more careful consideration than is ordinarily done; if the best results are to be had. The hardness of the animals and their ability usually to withstand such operations favorably leads the hog grower to consider the operation of castration an one requiring no particular care.

In order that young pigs will continue to gain after the operation without retardation of growth or other ill effects they should be castrated at a time which will allow the wounds to become entirely healed before weaning. At such age pigs are easily handled, the operation is conveniently and successfully performed, and perfect healing of the wounds is facilitated through their being nourished and protected by the sow. Complications, with attending stunting of growth, which sometimes happens at later ages, are not liable to occur at this age. Castrating before weaning is a good practice for the hog grower to establish.

When possible, cool days should be selected for the operation and cold, damp weather avoided. The pigs should be kept on a light diet for the 24 hours preceding the operation. The digestive tract should never be distended with feed at the time of the operation. A thorough washing of the scrotum with an antiseptic solution of liquid cresols, compositus, or cleaning with soap and water, is a part of the operation which should not be neglected. Extremely irritating solutions are painful to the cut surfaces, serve no useful purposes, and should be avoided. They may cause rubbing of the wounds and so result in greater injury to the parts.

In winter-time when I'm indoors, An' tired of all my toys, Along about, say, half-past four It's hard for little boys.

You see, the daylight fades away, An' night gets pretty near; An' then I hear my Daddy say, "I'm home!—are you there, dear?"

Oh, I throw back the nursery door, An' turn on all the light! It's gone, what seemed me so before, An' everything's all right;

I've no more funny creeps at all; But Gee! I'm awful glad To hear his voice! An' then I call "I'm here! Come on up, Dad!"

This Man Wouldn't Stay Down

HE was putting in long hours at monotonous unskilled work. His small pay scarcely lasted from one week to the next. Pleasures were few and far between and he couldn't save a cent.

He was down—but he couldn't stay down! He saw other men promoted, and he made up his mind that what they could do he could do. Then he found the reason they were promoted was because they had special training—an expert knowledge of some one line. So he made up his mind that he would get that kind of training.

He marked and mailed to Scranton a coupon like the one on the right. That was his first step upward. It brought him just the information he was looking for. He found he could get the training he needed right at home in the hours after supper. From that time on he spent part of his spare time studying.

The first reward was not long in coming—an increase in salary. Then came another. Then he was made Assistant Manager. Now he is Manager with an income that means independence and all the comforts and pleasures that make life worth living.

It just shows what a man with ambition can do. And this man is only one out of hundreds of thousands who have climbed the same steps to success with the help of the International Correspondence Schools.

What about you? Are you satisfied merely to hang on where you are or would you, too, like to have a real job and real money? It's

McNARY-HAUGEN BILL AN ACT TO CREATE EQUALITY

Instead of our regular weekly "talks" on publicty, we'll "lay off" this week and give you the best and briefest digest of the McNary-Haugen Bill that we have yet seen. You should be able to make some good use of it in your publicity in behalf of the measure.

For Agriculture, in brief the substance of the measure is:

1 To enable the producers, through an agency created for them, to purchase or to contract with others to purchase certain basic crops until the price thereof rises to the same exchange value compared with the commodities that obtained for a normally representative period prior to the war.

2 To protect that value by an adequate tariff.

3 To enable the producers to sell the quantity so purchased (which constitutes the exportable surplus) at the best prices ruling in the world markets.

4 To collect from the producer whatever loss there may be on the exportable surplus and the cost of operation of the agency.

5 To return to the Treasury any funds advanced by it.

Industry controls its own marketing mechanism, is protected by the tariff, encouraged by "legislative enactments", to combine for export trade (Webb-Pomerene and Edge bills), stands its own loss of operations.

Labor is protected by "Legislative enactment", i. e., the Adamson law and the restriction of immigration.

WASHED AND NEEDLE-HOLED EGGS NOT QUALITY EGGS

There are obstacles in the way of buying eggs on a quality basis with a premium for highest grade eggs, states the poultry and egg marketing department of the Illinois Agricultural Association in a statement to the Lake County Farm Bureau. The I. A. A. has been actively promoting the buying of eggs at country points on the basis of quality, and through the influence of the Illinois Poultry and Egg Shippers' association and recommended that eggs can be bought at country points this basis of grade.

Washed eggs will not grade as firsts and get the premium of five cents a dozen, says the I. A. A. The requirements for highest grade eggs are "strictly clean (not washed) fresh eggs; free from cracks and checks; weighing one and one-half pounds or more per dozen; no duck, bantam, guinea or small eggs."

The practice of washing eggs detracts from their grade as most of the eggs purchased at this season of the year are put into storage and are washed eggs will not keep in storage. Washing removes the protective covering and permits germs and molds to enter readily, bringing about decay.

Another practice brought to the attention of the poultry and egg marketing department which causes eggs to spoil in storage is that of pricking a hole through the shell of from pure bred poultry to prevent them from being bought at the market price for hatching purposes. These needle holes are too small to be detected in ordinary grading but they cause the eggs so treated to come out of storage almost a total loss.

If such practices as these are abolished, buyers would be much more favorable to buying eggs by quality says the I. A. A.

THOUGHT CARTOON HIT NAIL ON THE HEAD

"I think the cartoon in your February 20, issue sure locates the farmer" writes C. M. Elsbury, Paris. "To diversify and loan him money won't do him any good. We pay ten cents a bushel for bread the same as when wheat was $2.60 a bushel. It has been proven that if the farmer gave his wheat away it would lower bread costs less than one cent a loaf. I sold a nice beef hide this last winter for $1.44 that would make five pairs of shoes. How much cheaper would the shoes be if the hide were donated?"

"We can't persist in being the richest nation in the world if we persist in pauperizing our citizens."

PRODUCERS GROWING ALL THE TIME

The Chicago, Indianapolis and Peoria commission companies held first rank upon their respective markets continually for the first three months of 1924. St. Louis ranked second for January and February but in March held first rank most of the time. Other evidences of the growth of these cooperative commission companies is shown in a comparison of their receipts for January and February 1924, as contrasted with receipts of the same months in 1923.

Here are the figures:

	Jan.-Feb. 1923	Jan.-Feb. 1924
Chicago	2667	4015
E. St. Louis	1517	2238
Indianapolis	1891	2474
Peoria	399	687

If the increase in volume of business is any indication of the quality of service rendered by the cooperative livestock commission associations in which Illinois is interested, then these companies are manifesting that they are satisfying the farmers of Illinois.

I. A. A. TO MAKE SURVEY OF ILLINOIS SCHOOL SYSTEM

A survey of the rural school system of the state determine its relative efficiency with the systems of other states and the attitude of farmers toward important educational problems such as consolidation of schools, community high schools and township high school districts is a part of the plan of the Advisory Educational Committee of the Illinois Agricultural Association outlined at Executive Committee meeting April 4, according to information received by the Lake County Farm Bureau. The committee consisting of J. L. Whisman, Cambridge, A. C. Everingham, Bloomington and E. W. Rusk, Rusk, Carlinville, was appointed for the purpose of making a thorough investigation of the school problems of the state with a view to bettering school conditions.

The committee will make a study of the rural school problems from the standpoint of rural school teachers and county school superintendents. It plans also to work in co-operation with J. C. Watson, of the I. A. A. tax department insofar as school problems are related to tax matters. Definite suggestions from Farm Bureau Members as to needed changes in school laws will be welcomed by the committee.

"We believe," says the chairman of the committee, "that we have an important piece of work to do." We also believe that we have a workable plan that will get for the Illinois Agricultural Association and for all citizens of the state, much needed information.

News Notes Taken From Other Papers

The North Shore line, which has been granted a permit to operate a motor bus line between Waukegan and Woodstock via the city of McHenry, has just received fifteen new motor cars, which the company will use for their Waukegan service, and thus relieve a number of cars to cover new territory over which they expect to operate. Just how soon the Waukegan-Woodstock service will be inaugurated will likely depend upon the progress made on the cement road under construction between Volo and Woodstock. It is not improbable that the service will be started some time this summer.

The McHenry County Flying club is planning on holding a 500-mile Homer pigeon race some time in June. The club hopes to interest owners of pigeons at Elgin, Aurora, Batavia, St. Charles, Wheaton and other towns in the northern part of the state and if they are successful in their plans the entry list should be a large one.

The McHenry County Oil company is soon to open a bulk station at Hebron for the distribution of gasoline, kerosene and lubricating oils in the surrounding territory. H. M. Mann, who has been in the employ of the company at their Woodstock station during the past ten months, has been named the manager of the Hebron station.

Pris. W. Payne, Richmond school head, has been re-employed for another year, according to announcement made by school board members a few days ago. Prof. Payne, who has been acting in the dual capacity of superintendent of the grades and principal of the community high school for the past year, has given excellent satisfaction, and his re-employment meets with the approval of the patrons of the school and the people of the district generally.

Statistics of repairs, gasoline and oil consumption, depreciation and loads handled, demonstrated that the average difference in cost in running a car or truck over good hard roads and poor roads is approximately 5 cents per mile.

The average mileage of all cars and trucks in this country exceeds 6,000 yearly.

There are 14,000,000 cars and trucks running in the United States.

A simple multiplication proves that if all the roads in the United States were poor roads making them all into good roads would save more than four billions every year, or more than five times as much as is spent annually in this nation for good roads.

Of course, all the roads are not poor roads, and more than 80 per cent of the travel of our vehicles is over the good roads and not poor ones.

But if we had good roads vehicles would travel over them. Vehicles are now forced from the many poor to the few good road miles in order to avoid loss of time and the tremendous cost of travel over poor roads.

Any individual, asking himself whether his share of a new road tax will pay him, has only to figure the number of miles he will travel in a year over the good road and see what he, personally, will save. This computation, of course, leaves out of calculation any such factors as the saving he makes by the lowering of the price of goods he buys which travel the good roads, and any increase in his assets due to the increase of land values on the good road, and any increase in earning capacity due to the time saved on good roads. With figures so plain and savings so obvious it is difficult to understand why anyone thinks that national highways, built and maintained by the National Government, will not more than pay for themselves in a very short period.

The Communion of Saints

Perhaps a definition of terms will be a good start toward treating this theme, which forms part of the Apostles' Creed. We would not use the term today to express what the people meant who used that word in the Creed. They meant, not people who were perfect, but those who were trying to be, or who wanted to be. We would call them church members or Christians. The word Communion refers to the practice of meeting together for worship, and mutual helpfulness. Suppose we put it in modern parlance and say that "We believe in the institutions of worship, and that those who are trying to be Christians cannot afford to neglect such social services." The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews admonishes his readers "not to neglect the assembling together for worship." Today, as we study modern psychology, we are impressed with the imperative nature of human needs, which makes such advice thoroughly up-to-date.

Man is a gregarious animal. When God said, according to the Genesis account, that it was not good for man to live alone, He meant more than merely that a man needed a wife. Man needs a whole family, and a whole neighborhood, and a whole nation, and a whole world, and then he needs besides that, communion with the spirit of God, in order that his whole nature may be developed. From the time when animals first stood up on their hind legs and looked up at the sky, the whole biped race has had a history. They have not been individualists. They have lived in groups, and only in groups have they been able to find adequate self expression. A study of science is responsible for the modern emphasis on Social religion, as contrasted with the older individualistic emphasis. According to the old way of thinking, when we had told the story of Jesus and his revelation of God to an individual we had done our duty. Twenty years ago, at the national Y. M. C. A. convention the plans were laid for carrying the story of the gospel to all nations of the earth, and they thought that was enough. According to one idea, when that had been done, the end of the world was expected. We are far from such a childish conception today. We are now girding our loins for the task of not only telling the story of the gospel to the ends of the earth, but living with the nations of the earth until they shall understand the full meaning of the story. Today we send not only a preacher, but teachers, nurses, doctors, agriculturists and foresters and teach the full social implications of the gospel. We now know that one is not a Christian until the Christian life is lived out into every social relationship.

But what has that to do with worship? Worship is the finest method we know for giving of ourselves to others. It is more than trying to get something from God. It is a social act. It is communion not only with God, but with men—with others who love God—and are trying to know Him better. But why not stay at home and hear a sermon over the radio? That is beside the point. Hearing a sermon over the radio may be worship and it may not be worship. It may be one way of being selfish—so selfish that you will not be willing to exert yourself enough to make your contribution to those of your fellows for the common good, by uniting with them in worship. It may be a substitute for a service of worship, but it is as far from social worship as the east is from the west. And I say that, realizing that as far as the sermon is concerned, it may be infinitely better than the one you may hear at the social place of meeting.

It may be that many people go to church for selfish reasons—with the primary motive of getting a share of God's blessings, and certainly we all need a share. But I am convinced that the act of social worship ought to be an act of self dedication to the service of others. We ought to be driven to our knees before we go to church, by the thought that what we are, and the way we worship may be the means of salvation, or of great spiritual strength, to our neighbors. The highest act of worship—the highest act of union with God, is when we sink our own spirit, and our individual needs, with those of our neighbors, in social dedication to Him. All

This is meant by those words, "The Communion of Saints." Every true Christian will surely count it one of the chief privileges of life thus to join with his fellows in the presence of God, in dedication to His Kingdom. —E. Lester Stanton.

State to Take Charge of Small Pox Cases Report

Drastic steps to prevent further outbreaks of small pox in Waukegan and Lake county have been taken by Dr. A. J. Markley, of the state board of health.

Dr. Markley has telegraphed Dr. Isaac Rawlings, head of the department, asking that a state quarantine officer be dispatched to Waukegan immediately. This man is expected to arrive the first of the week.

He will be instructed to watch conditions in this section of the state making temporary headquarters in Waukegan. The quarantine officer will have the power to act in the city, county or any part of the state so that boundary lines will not encroach upon the power of the health authorities seeking to halt the plague.

Dr. Markley has left instructions for the quarantine officer to check up all cases in order to learn who has come in contact with patients. All contacts will be quarantined until the period of incubation is over.

These steps, according to Dr. Markley, are not being taken because the local situation is exceedingly alarming but because it might be unless something of this order is done.

State health officers reinforced the Waukegan health authorities and a strict quarantine is to be enforced in an effort to stamp out smallpox not only in the city but in the county, as several new cases have been reported and a recent exposure appears to have jeopardized hundreds.

Dr. A. J. Markley, of the state board of health, came to Waukegan to confer with Dr. Howard C. Hoag, city health physician, concerning the case of a barber named Martin, who is reported to have exposed hundreds of persons before he finally skipped out of the city and landed in the isolation hospital in Chicago.

Dr. Hoag quarantined the Gray boarding house on North County st., and also fumigated the Midget barber shop on Washington street, where Martin had sought work. Dr. Markley declared that Dr. Hoag took the proper course in the matter. Earl Trembley, proprietor of the Midget, has been quarantined, and since the shop has been fumigated it is in the charge of George Hutchings, who has just returned from California.

Dr. Markley has instructed Dr. Hoag and Edward Cliff, city health officer, to quarantine every person known to have been exposed by Martin. Dr. Martin went to Grayslake where smallpox has been reported in one family. Several other cases also are under observation.

Martin is believed to have exposed hundreds of persons, as there were a number of persons at the rooming house going to work at such places as bakeries, restaurants, factories, shops, etc.

A country farmer walked into the general store in the village. "I want," said he, "that tub of margarine and that bacon and all the other food-stuffs."

"Good gracious!" said the recently bereaved widow, who kept the store. "What do you want with all them things, Mr. Giles?"

"I dunno," replied the worthy farmer, "but you know, I'm the executor of your husband's will, and Lawyer Stiles said I was to be sure and carry out all the provisions."

Passion Week services are being held at the church this week. On Tuesday night there was a service of worship. The sermon subject was "The Trial of Pontius Pilate." On Wednesday night the children of the Junior department gave a short Pagent entitled, "Her Easter Choice." Tonight (Thursday) the Lord's Supper will be celebrated, and tomorrow a group of the adults will present a short pageant entitled, "The Challenge of the Cross." After the service Friday night the choir will rehearse for the Easter Cantata, which will be rendered Sunday night. On Sunday morning a sacrifice offering will be taken for missions.

Church night is to be Thursday, April 24, from 6 to 9:30 p. m. The supper committee will be Mrs. W. R. Williams, Mrs. Roy Williams and Mrs. Wm. H. Ross. The menu is: Meat pie (any kind), baked potatoes, rolls, butter, relish, pie (any kind), and coffee will be served by the church. The evening's program will be the same as usual, with the exception that Miss Ella Ames will teach the class in Missions, instead of Miss Smith; and the subject of the Bible Study class will be the Gospel according to John. An interpretation of Jesus. A staff photographer from the Department of Conservation and Advance will be there to shoot the bunch, to make a slide for advertising the work on this district. Come and bring the family.

T. G. RHODES EXPRESSES IDEAS ON COOPERATION

Mr. T. G. Rhodes, proprietor of the Chicago Footwear Co., of Chicago, had intended to be present at the Antioch Business Club dinner Monday night, but at the last moment was detained in Chicago on business. Mr. Rhodes' communication to Mr. McGee, the manager of the local store, so clearly outlines the principles of cooperation that permission to publish this letter was gained. Ideas from the viewpoint of outside business men may be secured. Mr. Rhodes' letter follows:

J. W. McGee,
Antioch, Illinois.
Dear Mr. McGee:

I hope that the business men of Antioch formulate some plan by which they could see their way clear to form and have a permanent business men's organization.

Unless they realize how necessary it is to have concerted action on nearly every item of interest that comes up in a business way, a social way or a physical way, a business organization will be of very little or no value to them; but if they do they will compare their business organization to the training of a foot ball team. Just for example, should you see a lot of fellows of equal weight and strength up against a lot of trained athletes and expect the ones without training to beat them at their game. Whore would they finish? Such things do occur, but when an organization is formed for a planned purpose, each working for the interest of all, benefits are derived by all and the community at large. Nobody is wronged and everybody is benefited.

For example, let one of the residents of Antioch go to the Soo Railroad and expect them to change their plans for the benefit of one individual or at the whim of an individual, and then imagine a strong combination of business men going with a concrete form of demand showing them how it would benefit all to work in conjunction with the organization or perchance it might be necessary to show the Soo Railroad that the Antioch people are independent of them under present road conditions in which they can form a bus line to go direct from Chicago and bring the people out if they find it necessary or to their benefit to offset the threat of the Soo Railroad to make individual communication tickets in place of these that are interchangeable.

The many things that come up can not be controlled or influenced by any one man, it seems that it is almost impossible to get any benefit unless there is concerted action, and I assure you I heartily approve of the organization and encourage you to be one of those who make it your business to the extent of requirements to assist and in every way help the city of Antioch and be as much benefit to them as it is possible to be.

One of the very important things that the business men of Antioch must do is to be sure that the merchants of Antioch receive a fair percentage of profits on their sales; but that any merchant who should attempt to get more than a fair profit on merchandise should be discouraged in every way that any bus, taxicab or parties serving the town of the tourists, campers and resorters should get a fair price for his service, but that the interest of the tourists, campers and resorters should be guarded against all who may be inclined to take advantage of strangers who may come to the town of Antioch, because the town must maintain its reputation of fair dealing with reasonable prices to all, courteous treatment and in every way make every visitor to Antioch pleased with their call and satisfied with the service, their entertainment and make them anxious to return, because in that way they will build up a reputation that will be enviable and a credit to the town and the community, and be a great pride to all the merchants and all the residents of Antioch.

Let us always remember that ever since man began to think and plan there has been improvement and now men are banding together, thinking and planning of how they can add the universe and help their fellow men, and Antioch certainly should be in the front line, because they have a wonderful opportunity to exhibit the kindest fellowship as they have a greater number of guests than the majority of places have. So, do your utmost to encourage the Business Men's Organization, become a permanent one and one, with high ideals and good cheer to all.

You, of course, have noticed that I have written quite an unusual long letter, but I am so interested in the welfare of Antioch, the welfare of its business interests and the assurance that all the visitors, resorters and tourists that come to Antioch or go through Antioch will be entertained in the proper manner and make them feel as though they had been well entertained.

Bellevo me, Mr. McGee, I would like to have you recommend that the merchants of Antioch put up a good, big, strong propaganda along these lines and each get in the habit of saying "what you get in Antioch is recommendable" "what is done in Antioch is commendable."

Yours truly,
T. G. RHODES.

THE NEW BOARD

Antioch elected its board members for the coming year Tuesday. The election was a quiet one and the new members are known to be of the progressive type. Cooperation and a progressive administration will be looked forward to.

With the formation of the new business club and its wonderful headway in its short duration of existence, the new board of trustees must realize that these gentlemen mean business, and that their entire support will be behind the new village governing board in any project that they may undertake for the betterment of the village.

That Antioch is placed at a disadvantage through lack of cooperation in keeping up with more progressive towns is not going to deter the business men from working all the harder to make up for the lost time.

Already we have placed a Main street that is second to none for a town of its size. The class of new construction is equal, if not better, than is seen in towns of this size and even larger.

Antioch boasts of a motion picture house that is incomparable for a town of this size—to say nothing of the one now under construction. Its new and reconstructed stores and restaurants have far surpassed the expectation of what can be done in this town to help make it an object of beauty and pleasure to live and do business in. And if the headway accomplished in the last few years is any criterion of what is to come, Antioch will well hold up its position in what Mr. Clifford terms as "the most wonderful section in the world," referring to business opportunities of the state of Illinois, particularly the section around Chicago. On this new board lies the responsibility of cooperation on the ideas of the new club. Realizing the present financial standing of the town, these ideas will have to be constructed with conservatism. Yet improvements must be the main objective.

The building construction and business getting will be taken care of by the merchants. The conditions of roads lie in the hands of the board and the road commissioner. It is to these gentlemen that the town will look to to uphold their end of the bigger, better Antioch, for you may build the most pretentious castle in the world, but people will not travel to see it over a rickety tumbling down bridge.

Probably one of the most noticeable unimprovements of the village is our lighting problem. It is hoped that the new board will find ways and means to cooperate with the village business men to eliminate our antiquated system. Then again one of our most frequently traveled highways is in sore need of attention. Depot street has long been a sore contention for improvement. It is hoped the new town officials will take this matter under consideration at an early date.

FARMERS RESUMED OLSON MILK DELIVERIES

Farmers supplying the A. J. Olson milk plant at Woodstock who have been out on a strike since two weeks ago Tuesday, resumed deliveries after almost a two weeks' strike, having won a victory, according to announcement by Milk Producers' Association officials.

The settlement provided for which ends the strike gives farmers the full association price for April, May and June, on milk equal to the amount taken at the plant during last July, August and September. They will receive butter fat prices for all over that amount.

Originally the Olson company which is controlled by the Welland Dairy company, offered to take only about two-thirds of the supply at the association price and the remainder at the butter fat price. Under the new plan only a small amount of milk will be sold at the butter fat prices.

The settlement was agreed on at a meeting in Chicago of Producers' officials and the Olson officials.
